Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Resurrection of Griffin Ballard Blurb His wife was dead. The cerebral hemorrhage which finally claimed her after a terrible car accident had left him alone and feeling much older than his years. He d married young and half his life had been spent as a provider, a faithful husband and the father of two grown children. He felt he was far closer now at forty-four to his end, than to his beginning. He d stopped living. His lawn untended, food of no importance, business in the dumps.only his dog, his constant companion, claimed his attention. A walk in the park, his first in a month, finally got him out of his house. Kody, his bright white furry beast, always on display, always the most magnificent creature in the park, drew her to him. She did not see the pain or the suffering, the self-doubt and the resignation to a future alone. All she could see was the devilishly handsome guy.kind, gentle, cultured and intelligent. A man in need and yet a man who could give so much to those around him. It may have been his chick-magnet dog that brought her to him, but now it would be up to her to gain his attention and admiration before wrapping herself around him and never letting go. He too, was stricken. How beautiful in face and figure she was.how kind and attentive. But while grateful to be brought back amongst the living, to feel masculine and drawn to her mystery, she was no more than a teen and a casual encounter in the park would be the limit of their meeting. Trouble was, although an ingenue and half his age, there was no...
