If clothes make the man - what is left when he undresses? Beau Brummell is the king of fashionable society, a fact which torments the eldest son of Mad King George, who would do anything to be the master of the mode. With the help of his secret Catholic wife and Dick the Dandy-Killer, the rakish Prince has everything required to ruin his rival fashionisto. Will His Royal Highness survive the obsession, or will he be destroyed by his own yearning to outdo the Beau? This honest tale of the Georgian/Regency era reveals the charm and cattiness of the two first gentlemen of one of history's best-dressed moments. From Brummell's ditzzy quips of Brummelliana to the Prince's overdramatic lamentations, the reader is sure to be swept up in a sparkling and humorous world of fashion, passion and jealousy.
