As of November 2002, development test aircraft have been completing only 0. 29 hours between maintenance actions. Additionally, the program was slow to fix and correct problems that had affected reliability. At the time of our review in July 2002, program officials had identified about 260 different types of failures and had identified fixes for less than 50 percent of the failures. To achieve reliability goals will require additional design changes, testing, and modifications. Therefore, additional problems and costs can be expected if the system is fielded with the level of reliability achieved to date. The F A-22 did not take advantage of evolutionary, knowledge-based It Is Too Late for the F A-concepts up front and now, the best it can hope for is to limit cost 22 Program to Gain Full increases and performance problems by not significantly increasing its Benefit of a Knowledge-production until development is complete...
