CHAPTER XII SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS Disharmonies in the human constitution as the chief source of our sorrows--Scientific data as to the origin and destiny of man--The goal of human existence--Difficulties in the way of scientific investigation of the problem--What is progress --Difficulty of including the whole human race in a scheme of progress and morality--The instincts of life and of natural death--Application to real life of the doctrines set forth in hits book Man, who is a descendant of some anthropoid ape, has inherited a constitution adapted to an environment very different from that which now surrounds him. Man is possessed of a brain very much more highly developed than that of his ancestors, and has entered on a new path in the evolution of the higher organisms. The sudden change in his natural conditions has brought about a large series of organic disharmonies which become more and more acutely felt as he becomes more intelligent and more sensitive. And thus there has arisen a number of sorrows which poor humanity has tried to relieve by all the means in its power. The disharmonies in the sexual functions have brought into existence attempted remedies of the strangest kind. The greatest disharmony of the constitution is that of the morbid nature of old age and the impossibility of reaching the instinct of natural death; this has produced childish and erroneous conceptions of the immortality of the soul and of the resurrection of the body, and...
