After several years of contending for a title with the Cavs, but never winning it all, James made headlines around the world due to how he changed teams. Called The Decision, James announced on live television with a special on ESPN that he was going to join the Miami Heat, in a move that many basketball fans saw as cheating or poor sportsmanship. Since then, he has become both the most loved and most hated man in basketball. What caused such a dramatic shift in the public s view of this player?
