Excerpt: . you home, and told me what you had done; and further, that grandpapa was expected home every hour. What distress thia bad news would occasion me; and you too would fear, when you heard that grandpapa was coming home. How you would weep, and ask me to forgive you, and promise never to do it again. Well, but what is to be done? I should ask. And then I should begin to think what I could do to save you from the punishment of grandpapa s displeasure, in which you would most likely be forbidden to enter the garden again; which would make dear grandpapa unhappy too. I should think of you, shut up at home, or shut out of the garden, while all the rest were happy within; and then these heart-breaking reflections would nerve me to do all I could to set the things to rights before grandpapa returned, if possible, for you could not mend the panes of glass, and repair the branches in the garden, however you might wish, you know. Well, suppose I had a very little money, and a few luxuries which I sold, and with the money paid a glazier to replace the broken panes, and some gardeners to set the garden to rights. How anxiously I should watch, and urge them to make haste, until the work was done! Well, as soon as it was finished, grandpapa arrives! he walks round the garden with me,...
