Not illustrated. 1851 Excerpt: . . . which the covers of books were subjected, and more particularly to the total destruction of all the Roman Libraries by the successive irruptions of the Northern armies into the Western empire, and the sacking of Alexandria and Constantinople by the Saracens and Turks, no perfect remains of bookbinding, as it was in their time, has come down to us. The subject shall be continued, or resumed, in order to illustrate the state and, progress of the Art during the Monastic Eha. H. N. Situations. --Our worthy Secretary has hinted that members seldom intimate to him their being in want of situations, and that still more rarely do they make Mm acquainted with a knowledge of vacancies as they occur. Now, we think it would go far to establish a mutual confidence in each other, as well as to extend the usefulness of the Association, were the practice more generally adopted, for by its means that which, in the long run, is the true, interest of all, would be more speedily brought about. Half-kound To Pat. --An Irish gentleman having occasion to call on his bookbinder, happened to obtain admittance to the work-shop, when making some inquiry as to some Quarterly Reviews which were to be done to pattern, they were pointed out to him, and on the end paper was written Half-bound to Pat. Imagining this to have reference to him as an Irishman, he felt most indignant, and insisted upon his books being immediately sent...
