Observe. --As the Princess does not move during the first three scenes, she may be fastened to a nail. Eglantine and Paquerette. PAQUERETTE. Mademoiselle, dear Princess, pray do not turn your back so upon me. Do look a little at me: I am your Paquerette, your friend. Confide your trouble to me. . . . You do not reply. For the eight days that you have remained in this garden you have not once so much as opened your mouth, even to eat. This may hurt you: and, in fact, I observe that your face is very pale. You must indeed be very sad, to keep silent so long. At least move your little finger, that one may see whether you are dead or alive. It is to-day that your future husband arrives at court. . . . Ah! what do...
