An important part of the Surveillance Program is a network of population based cancer reporting systems the Surveillance, Epidemiology, and End Results (seer) Program. Related efforts gather and disseminate information on cancer, cancer risk factors, and other elements of cancer control through a variety of reports. The Program also conducts studies on the organization, delivery, and financing of cancer prevention and control services, as well as on the economics of cancer. The Surveillance Program includes three branches: the Cancer Statistics Branch, responsible for the seer program; the Applied Research Branch, which conducts a variety of analytic and methodological studies including health services research and develops methods related to cancer surveillance and the evaluation of cancer control; and the Computer Systems Branch, which provides comprehensive computer systems analysis, design, operation, and programming support for the Division.
