

No Fear of Flying

---

By William W. L. Clague

C&G Publishing. Paperback. Condition: New. 322 pages. Dimensions: 9.1in. x 6.1in. x 0.6in. No Fear of Flying is no ordinary memoir. One reader said it was so kaleidoscopic that it might almost be an offshoot from tales of the Arabian Nights. The author Bill Clague is a descendant of the famous Wakefield family which promoted British settlement in New Zealand, Australia and Canada during the mid-19th century. Bill has lived in eight countries and his work in the airline industry has seen him travel to every corner of the world. In one six year period he spent a year of his life at over 20,000 feet, spending more hours aloft than airline pilots are legally allowed to fly. The book contains fascinating observations on cities around the world, from Perth and Singapore to Los Angeles and Rio de Janeiro, as well as details of his meetings with many well-known figures. Contacts have included Alan Bond, Imelda Marcos, Robert Muldoon, the Beatles, Ronald Biggs, Reginald Ansett, Cliff Richard, Cary Grant and many others. In addition to his career with Ansett Airlines and Continental Airlines, Bill has run an air traffic control network, was chief executive of a power company, sat on...
