STONE DONKEYS NEGATIVE SHADOWS

Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Margaret Bailey s story opens with her separated from an abusive mate, alone with two toddlers and struggling to get a foot hold in a new town. She jumps at the chance to become a pipefitter, a job traditionally held by men. The benefits would include lifting her family out of poverty and answering a question; what it is men do on their jobs that earned them the biggest and the best of everything although the woman in the home worked just as hard. She d be vetted by a committee of journeymen who had plenty of questions that would validate her toughness. Are you afraid of working over water, asked one. She related how her mother and she would wakeup about 3 a.m. many weekday mornings and walk the three plus miles to a seafood factory that was situated over water. She had her own crab knife and heavy duty plastic apron that slapped against her eight-year-old ankles. She d slip her head through the neck hoop, loop the waist strings in the back, wrap them around her body and tie them in the front before getting busy separating the backs and other innards from the crabs. The pay compensation was for each 55 gallon drum of trash generated by the process. OK, why did you move to Savannah, asked another committee member with a hard stare and perked ears. To get a fresh start, Margaret replied and followed with a few other details about her past that would hopefully satisfy the inquiry. She chose not to share how incestuous family members sought to destroy her childhood innocence, and about the women including Auntie Annette, Nancy and...
