(Marsh and Watson s Diseases of Joints, Cassell.) attempt should be made to cut down on the diseased area without opening the joint and to scrape away all tuberculous material. If this is done early in the disease a general invasion of the synovial membrane may be prevented. It is important not to go through the synovial cavity when exposing the epiphysial line. The lateral reflection of the synovial membrane at the level of the epiphysial line can be avoided by keeping close to the posterior edge of tin lateral surface of the femur. If the synovial cavity is opened, then it is advisable to pack the wound and allow adhesions to form which will shut off the general joint cavity and to gouge into the bone about two days later. When the cavity in the bone has U-en Rcra! a little iodoform powder may be put in. It is advisable to use ihf large flake iodoform, as less liable to produce toxic symptoms, and to mix it with 8 parts of boric powder. Caseation and Suppuration.--Pus, as soon as formed, must br evacuated, otherwise the joint will rapidly disorganise and sinuses form; the risk of secondary infection is then very great. The great majority of cases that in former days came to amputation were the result of mixed infection; failing..
