Excerpt from Anniversary Address Delivered Before the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Medical Department of Columbia College, New York City: March 2d, 1869 We will allude to but one other of the many advantages suggested by faithfully kept records throughout all the States the formation of life Tables, exhibiting the probabilities or expectation of life; upon which are based those beneficent institutions, now becoming quite popular in this country, (as they have long been in England and on the continent, ) [Life Assurance and Annuity Societies. It may not be generally known, that until recently in Massachusetts, we have heretofore been indebted wholly to foreign registration (the Carlisle and Northumberland tables) for their establishment! Such should not continue the humiliating fact. Again, from the very imperfect Registration now established in this country, our statistics represent human life, in the United States, of shorter duration than in England. But as it might be expected, says an English statistician, from the similarity of the human organization that all classes would, ceteris paribus, live, on an average, the same number of years, it becomes important to ascertain whether this be the case, and if it be not, to determine to what extent life is shortened under unfavorable circumstances. The Life Table answers this purpose, and is, says the same authority, as indispensable in sanitary inquiries, as the barometer or thermometer and other instruments in physical research. By this simple method, the mean duration of life, uncertain as it appears to be, and as it is with reference to individuals, can be determined with the greatest accuracy in nations, and in still smaller communities. Upon applying it to...
