Excerpt from The Structure of Animal Life: Six Lectures Delivered at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in January and February, 1862 IN bequeathing to the Brooklyn Institute a fund the interest of which was to be applied to the purchase Of pictures by the best American artists, Mr. Graham, no doubt, proposed to him self gradually to build up a gallery in Brooklyn which Should Show to future generations the state of the arts in the past. SO also, in these lectures, which we have denominated the Graham Lec tures, he designed to supply a series of lectures by men of the highest literature and science, which, by being published, Should furnish a series of authors that would evince to future ages the progress of thought and talent among their auces tors, and become a valuable part of the literature Of our country. For these lectures he designed that the proofs of the Power, Wisdom, and Goodness of God should be drawn directly from His works, as they exist in, and in fact constitute nature. The Obvious teaching of the creation can hardly be questioned. Every man is, in some measure, an admirer of the works of God. From the moment when, as a child.
