Excerpt from The Brief: Adventures in the Courts of a New Country and Incidental Studies in the Morbid Anatomy of Government by Organized Corruption The Bible suggests that God was the first Judge. That being so, a judiciary is too sacred a power to abuse: and those who do not take the succession reverently are not morally qualified for the bench. All this, and a great deal more, is extract from a diary, corroborated by indisputable facts, and true. Hamlet complains of insolence of office. High offices are secured by skillful advertising, secret influence, and other forms of bribery: and hypocrites obtain appointive jobs and salaries in the gift of those so elect at your expense. Readers are variously impressed: One item of our diaries, entitled The Black Hand, in a booklet of sketches called Tears and Smiles of some years ago, for instance, brought forth the question of eminent students whether-social degenerates, so called, do not, after all, display more love for their fellow men than does the average of the public pay-roll: or is it a case of extremes meeting, - those above the law, bureaucrats, and those beyond, anarchists? We have seen mouths water with joy over the imposition upon the Shylock who never lived: and the objects of the rapture neither saw the farce in the play nor the corrupt license of the plot to rob, or knew that the pound of flesh law never was.
