Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from State Socialism in New Zealand In giving a critical account of some phases of state activity in New Zealand, we have kept in mind the point of view of the foreign observer and that of the citizen of the Dominion who takes part in the discussion of public affairs. From the former point of view it is desirable that the workings of the various social experiments should be shown as they are, without exaggeration or concealment, if anything is to be learned of their success or failure, or any knowledge obtained that might be used in the cause of social reform in other countries. From the latter point of view nothing is more important than the active discussion of public questions, for it is by this means that the conflict of interests results in compromise and legislation. But it is not enough to make a law and create a governmental department, for a department is no more to be trusted than a private corporation, and the struggle for good government must go on all the time, if abuses are to be corrected and the liberties of the people to be preserved. It is well that members of Parliament and editors give time and thought to public questions; but manufacturers and merchants, farmers and labourers, and all the other classes must do the same, that no one set of interests be allowed to dominate the rest, and that all may work together for the common weal.
