Excerpt from A General Collection of the Best and Most Interesting Voyages and Travels in All Parts of the World, Vol. 14: Many of Which Are Now First Translated Into English, Digested on a New Plan Almofi all the commodities of Europe are difiributed through the Spani?t America by a fort of pedlars or merchants, on foot, who come from Panama to Payta by fea, and in their road from the lall-mentioned port, make Piura their firll ftage to Lima, difpofing of their goods, and leffening their burdens as they go along. Some take the road through Caxamarca, others through Truxillo, along fhore from Lima: they take their palfage back to Panama by fea, and perhaps carry a little cargo of brandy with them at Panama they again flock themfelves with European goods, returning by fea to Payta, where they are put on fhore; there they hire mules, and load them, the Indians going with them, in order to bring them back; and fo thefe traders keep in a continual round, till they have got enough to live on. Their travelling expences are next to no thing; for the Indians are brought under fuch fubjeetion, that they find lodging for them, and provender for their mules: this every white face may command, being a homage the poor Indians are long accullomed to pay; and fome think they have an honour done into the bargain, except, out of generofity, they now and then meet with a fmall recompence. In the Britifh and French nations a pedlar is defpifed, and his employment looked upon as a mean fhift to get a living; but it is otherwife here, where the quick return of money is a...
