Past and present collide when an Alzheimers patients fragile memory holds the key to solving mysteries dating back to World War II including a long lost secret love affair. Music professor Gus LeGarde is just doing a favor for a friend when he agrees to play piano for church services at a local nursing home. He doesnt expect to be drawn into a new friendship with an elderly Alzheimers patient dubbed the music man or to stumble across a decades-old mystery locked inside the mans mind. Octogenarian Kip Sterling doesnt know his own name but he speaks Guss language, spouting jazz terms like cadence and interlude and riff. Hes also obsessed with his Bella, but nobody knows who she is. When Kip is given a new drug called Memorphyl, he starts to remember bits and pieces of his life. Gus learns Bella was Kips first and only love, but their relationship was shrouded in scandal. Intrigued, Gus agrees to help search for her. Could she still be alive Horrified when the miracle drug suddenly stops working and patients begin to backslide, Gus...
