Historical Studies in Philosophy

By mile Boutroux

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 348 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.8in. An excerpt from the Homiletic Review, Volume 65: THIS book contains five well-written dissertations concerning five famous philosophers: Socrates, the father of moral science; Aristotle, the greatest of Greek thinkers, Jacob Boehme, the German speculative mystic; Descartes, the pioneer in modern metaphysics; and Immanuel Kant, who lived in the eighteenth century and whose views, widely propagated during the nineteenth century, are at the present day exerting a greater influence on mental science than those of any other writer. These essays of Professor Boutroux are selections from numerous lectures, delivered at the cole Normale Suprieure and the Sorbonne, in which he gave minute analyses of various philosophical systems. We may regard these Studies as intended to set forth the distinguishing thoughts of those authors who, in Professor Boutroux's opinion, have been the most successful leaders of the world in the search after fundamental truth. The method adapted by Socrates, which was that of question and answer or of conversational disputation, was that also adopted by Plato. It assumed that many general truths can be ascertained by the careful interrogation of common sense or natural...
