Justice to Future Generations and the Environment

By H. P. Visser 't Hooft

Springer. Paperback. Condition: New. 170 pages. Dimensions: 9.1in. x 6.0in. x 0.6in. The analysis of justice between generations proposed in this book is based first of all on a critical reading of Rawls theory of justice, but it also pays attention to the existential and cultural context of our intuitions about intergenerational equity. Although the desire for justice supplies an independent reason for action, the unprecedented character of the context in which that reason must operate necessarily raises the question of its psychological support: we want justice for future people, but what interest do we have in their welfare in the first place I have tried to capture this double orientation by making use of Thomas Nagels conceptual dichotomy between the objective, detached point of view, and the subjective (in our case: the culturally and historically situated) perspective. There is, on the one hand, a desire for justice that tends towards the definition of transhistorical standards, detached from the particular values of the time and place; there is, on the other hand, a motivational background that is tied to our present position in history, and nourished by the values we presently believe in. I have attempted to bridge the gap between the...
