Excerpt: .no one who knew the lecturer s admirable powers of expression could fail to expect, and expectation was exceeded; for if it be judged merely as a literary achievement, the discourse he pronounced may fairly be held to surpass the very high level he had hitherto maintained. In point of sober eloquence it rises to the best traditions of English philosophical literature. Although the lecturer is in his own sphere the first of living scientific authorities, it is an excellent feature of his method that his peculiar knowledge was almost everywhere subordinate, and used, if at all, for illustrative purposes; so that he was free to treat a wide subject in a wide spirit, untrammelled by the influence of special studies. For in spite of strong scientific interests and the limits they sometimes impose upon minds imbued with them, Mr. Huxley has always taken...
