To the grateful mind nothing can be more agreeable, than to reflect upon the display of divine mercy; for while it fills the soul with wonder and admiration, it excites to gratitude, praise and love. And surely there is nothing, in which the pious soul exerts herself with greater fervour, than in the exercises of love, of gratitude, of thanksgiving to God for all his benefits. Such is the delightful business in which we are invited to engage to day. On this second centennial anniversary of the landing of the fathers of New-England, every friend of God may reap peculiar pleasure. The business for which we are assembled, is no less agreeable to the grateful heart, than it is important to every sharer in the unmerited blessings which result from the events we commemorate.
