Excerpt from Nervous Exhaustion, Its Cause and Cure: Comprising a Series of Eight Lectures on Debility and Disease, as Delivered Nightly at Dr. Kahn s Museum of Anatomy, With Practical Information on Marriage, Its Obligations and Impediments The following pages are pre-eminently practical: I am no theorist. To offer theory when assistance is required is very like giving a stone in answer to a request for bread. Speculation we have enough of - hypothesis we are nearly surfeited with - what we want is something that can be put into practice. I have related my own medical experience, and narrated cases that have come under my own observation. This may seem egotistical, but it is the 1 only true method of procedure. Why should I devote my book to what occurred to others? I know nothing of it, except by hearsay. What I have seen, that I speak of, because that I know: Nor have I succumbed to that false prudery which is so prevalent in society: I have disregarded it because I believe it to be mischievous and to have no connection with real, genuine modesty. I have told plain facts, and those who affect to be shocked at them will only remind me of the young lady whose modesty was so great that she could not look at the naked truth. My aim is a good one: if men misinterpret my motive I cannot help it, nor do I care for what they may say.
