VDM Verlag. Paperback. Condition: New. 316 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.8in. x 0.8in. For generalists unaware that loss is pandemic in Child Welfare, that foster mothers experience and perceive it differently and disproportionately, and that lack of mediation and comprehensive support systems traumatize everyone working in the system, this book is a must read. Child Welfare professionals agree that relationship is the foundation of social work practice but how it is experienced, perceived has not been explored. The author explains, outlines his findings recommending simple ways to make foster mothers feel of relationships real. Agencies should reexamine their incentive programs. Foster mothers prefer little acts or gestures communicated consistently in surprise manners to ennoble their spirit to awards of plaques and certificates at elaborate ceremonies. Agency training on interpersonal helping skills and cultural sensitivity must be ongoing to address workers lack of respect for foster mothers individuality and cultural differences. Training modules must address foster mothers everyday problems in care giving 24-7. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
