

War is Hell

By Arthur A. Edwards

Robertson Publishing. Paperback. Condition: New. 242 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 0.5in. A Tale of War and One Mans Search for Meaning This story is told by a soldier who was a part of the bloody war in Burma, the executive officer of a rugged group of American jungle fighters. He tells us in great detail what the war did to him and how he feels about taking another mans life even to protect his own as he searches for meaning in it all. . . World War II is winding down in the summer of 1945, but not for Major Jenkins and his band of Merrills Marauders. They have spent months combing the Burmese jungle for the notorious Japanese commander Colonel Maruyama and his troops. Major Jenkins, Captain Beltrans and what was left of their band were outnumbered two to one; so they had to devise a plan that would overcome the odds. But after they settled the score with their enemy, they had to march hundreds of miles through the jungle back to their base near the Indian border. It was now August and the war was over, but how would the local civilians living along the only...
