

Two Christmas Plays (Paperback)

By Nancy Funk

CSS Publishing Company, 1985. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The Lost Feeling of Christmas echoes themes from Charles Dickens A Christmas Carol to the extent that a grumpy senior citizen is forced, through a confrontive dream, to come to terms with what the time of Christ s nativity is really all about. The messenger who speaks most forcefully to him is, of all things, his cat. A Lot of Christmas Love speaks to a world where poverty and broken families are too painfully in evidence. A family has suffered the disappearance of husband and father. Those who are left to help mother and children cope find their relationships are strained, particularly as the Christmas season comes again. Like God, who comes disguised at Christmastime, this play includes a visit from a stranger in extraordinary dress. These two Christmas plays combine traditional biblical content from the Christmas cycle of stories with contemporary life. Each is a full program, taking approximately one hour to produce, and each involves a wide spectrum of participants from the congregation, including one or more choirs or singing groups. Those who purchase this two-play set will have a pair of excellent Christmas dramas...
