Capeable Publishing, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . A farmyard full of animals, thousands of tourists in the garden, a hundred backpackers in the house, millions of bees in the air - and one family. What could possibly go wrong? When Anna and Andrew move their young family to a farm, the future is uncertain. All they know is what they feel - a desire to become contributors, not consumers. City folk, they are starting from scratch not knowing how to make anything, grow anything, fix anything or really do anything . Ten years on, and the 90-acre farm transforms from a bland grass paddock to something that is energetic, vibrant, ethical and beautiful. The farm becomes home to honey and native bees and a multitude of plant and animal species; it lures thousands of visitors all seeking a slice of idyllic farm life to enrich their souls and, sometimes, their social media feeds. Meanwhile, Anna feeds her own soul, becoming a passionate producer of honey, herbs, handmade medicinal balms and other farm-made goods, recipes for which are included in this book. It s called living the dream , but is it? Discover more about the good life and enjoy a good laugh from this entertaining, engrossing book in which author Anna Featherstone lays bare what it s like to follow your dreams and to find success, failure and finally understanding along the way.
