History of Economics: Or Economics as a Factor in the Making of History (Classic Reprint)

By J. A. Dewe

Forgotten Books. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 352 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.7in. Excerpt from History of Economics: Or Economics as a Factor in the Making of History History is no longer a study of isolated events, but rather of the workings of unseen laws and influences. As the different phenomena of chemistry and physics receive their orderly arrangement and their power to interest only from their association with certain laws, so, in history, the facts that make up the narrative are but the material or medium through which are conveyed the workings of laws both universal and ever constant. The study of history has thus lost much of the dryness, and, perhaps, also some of the disregard in which it used to be held. No longer is it a mere committal to memory of battles and sieges, of alternating wars and treaties, of the rise and succession of dynasties. It is now a scientific research into the influences that bring about all these different results. The action of the motor power of certain laws is now seen in all the pages of history, and every event that takes place can be attributed to the action...
