Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The season of literature arrives with lots of poems, many fairy tales, plays, a novel and an essay as well. Three poems, all discussing Africa, the struggles of the African populace and possible light at the end of the tunnel. Is it The jungle of Dreams or Because of Utopia: these poems x-ray the cradle of governance? The work is full of pessimism, and insists that as regards prospects, African s scorecard is a futile expectation. It is completely blank. Love Goes Astray sets its foot into a religious setting. It criticizes the major actors of the christian faith, taking references from the Bible. The poem s major concern is the strife between Christ and Judas Iscariot. The Season of Drama contains the works of drama, this book persistently highlights the troubles of the present-day African society. Gasping for Euphoria exposes the conflict between the state and the church. The protagonist stumbles on to a crossroad; at a point he is quite unable to abide by the rules of institutions of men which contradict his and those of his family. As Far as Paradise is another play; it details such immanent struggles and challenges of some Africans who wish to travel abroad in the face of fiery hard times. The third play is Behind Open Doors. The government of the day is incredible and corrupt. The reason is not far fetched; several political aspirants have no antecedents; they also lack the requisite moral discipline to lead the people. Positions of authority are seen as mere open doors to their selfish desires and ambitions. Then enter a whole season of fairy tales, what a good number of people refer to as cock-and-bull...
