Dimensions: 10.0in. x 7.0in. x 0.2in.(Except from Foreword) This work is about the Transformation Agenda of Nigerias President Goodluck Elebe Jonathan. Many peoples negative views of this administration have found abundant examples of things that continue to go wrong as evidence and they point to decayed infrastructures, rampant corruption, lack of adequate energy supply, and insecurity among others. What detractors and critics of this administration minimize or fail to give fuller considerations are that these issues are very intractable for any one administration to tackle, and secondly, these issues existed long before this administration came to power. What this administration has failed to do is blow its own horns or loudly tout their achievements, large and small. But this does not align with the personality of our current truly civilian President, unaffiliated to the military since President Shagari. People have criticized President Jonathan for not being like previous blustery, obnoxious and ruthless military henchmen. They think he is not addressing instability and insecurity in the country because he has not sent soldiers to troubled regions to wipe everyone out. Nigerians are accustomed to military leaders who wipe out people and whole communities, rather than engage in constructive dialogues. Indeed democratic societies do engage its enemies, no matter how detestable we think they or their actions may be. President Jonathan is not disposed to draconian, undemocratic measures to solve problems within its borders. Previous leaders who wiped out whole communities merely postponed the issues, only to have them re-emerge in different forms, perhaps from different regions. This President has walked a very tight rope and has the fortune of leadership in an age of free press and social media explosion where minute events are magnified and...
