In the southern parts, the planting of all kinds of roses is carried on at all times of the year except when the ground is actually frozen. There is a great deal more latitude in planting than is generally supposed, and even in colder sections fall planting can be successfully done by heavily mulching before the ground freezes. For the man who wishes the least trouble at the time of planting and in after care, own-root roses are best. Budded stock is open to the objection of suckering, but the sucker nuisance is not serious if care is taken to place the point of union of stock and cion two inches below the ground surface. The term pot plants is used in two ways--either newly rooted cuttings from pots or old established plants that have been grown on and flowered one season in...
