When the unimaginable happens and Jordan loses her best friend on the night she had planned to tell him her feelings, it leaves her to wonder if she's the guilty party, but her memories of that night are fuzzy. In an attempt to leave her past and the hateful stares of her peers behind, she moves across the country to live with her mother in Esterwilde, Pennsylvania. It's a small close-knit town, but there no one should know about her past, or so she thought. When Zylar runs into the new girl in town he can't help but feel a connection, but he also knows her past harbors a horrible secret. He's heard the rumors, but doesn't believe them. Seeing Jordan in pain kills him and all he wants to do is take it away. Jordan soon realizes that no matter what she does she's not going to be able to outrun her past. Can Zylar show her that despite the hate and ignorance in the world that life is still worth living? Will she...
