Reviews

It is great and fantastic. I actually have read and so i am certain that i am going to going to go through once again yet again in the future. I realized this ebook from my dad and i encouraged this book to find out.

It is clear that the cost of production during these times should be dependent upon--(1) The fuel cost per unit. (2) The oil, water, waste, and stores. (3) The depreciation and repairs. All other charges--such as salaries, management, fitters wages, and running staff--ought to be left out of this cost, because the salaries woidd have to be paid whether the machinery was running loaded or not. Some time ago I made careful tests over a considerable period to discover the amount of coal used per unit for additional load. Deducting the lighting-up fuel, and all fuel which would have to be used whether the works were sending out energy or not, that is to say, the fuel used to keep the steam pipes warm, to keep the pumps running, and all radiation losses, I was surprised to find the following: -- The amount of coal used per unit over and above what would be used, provided no load was going out, did not exceed 25 lbs. of coal per unit. The comparison was as follows: At a convenient time a portion of the works was kept going, but no energy was being sent out, only the alternators energised, etc., and a direct comparison with the amount of fuel and other stores used was made, when the same boilers were kept at work and sending out energy into the mains, which gave the figures below: --. Total o-4o9 of id. per unit. It is quite clear,...
