FBC LTD, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Practical Anatomy: A Manual of Dissections Some for dissection are made of two principal shapes; in one, the edge is bevelled to the point, the back being straight; in the other, both back and edge are bevelled to a point midway between the two. The latter form is preferable for most purposes. The blade should not be more than an inch and a half long, and never double-edged, but the material of which the handle is constructed is a matter of indifference. For all ordinary dissection, it will be found most convenient to hold the scalpel like a pen; but for cleaning the fascia and muscles, and following out small nerves, it is better to hold it reserved, so that the back of the knife may be against the tissue which is to be preserved. In making the first incision through the skin of a limb, or in any other position where a long incision is required, the knife may, with advantage, be held under the hand, by which the wrist has more play, and the student has the opportunity of practising a mode of holding the knife, which he will find very useful when operating on the living body.
