RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 48 pages. Original publisher: Golden, Colo. : National Renewable Energy Laboratory, 2005 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)67767686 Subject: Photovoltaic cells -- Design and construction. Excerpt: . . . utility applications. The design study assumes the use of a high power (1 MW) inverter. Listed high power inverters for non-utility applications could be available in twelve months time, with a commitment to purchase 10 MW or more per year. In this case, there are ten parallel source circuits of seven series-connected modules forming a 50 kW sub-array and twenty sub-arrays feeding a single 1000-kW inverter and transformer for each 1 MW array. Significant cost reductions were seen for this design compared to the base case due to the reduced number of inverters and transformers. 1000 VDC monopolar - Modules can be rated for PV systems up to 1000 VDC under UL 1703. 1000 V BOS components (except for inverters) are available for traction, mining, and crane applications, but these components are generally not UL-listed. Listed inverters are not currently available, but suitable inverter technology exists. Load-break DC disconnects with low current ratings are not readily available, making these components more expensive than the 600 V versions. Twelve parallel source circuits of twelve series-connected modules form a 100 kW sub-array. Ten sub-arrays feed a single 1000-kW inverter and transformer for each 1 MW array. 1000 VDC bipolar - This design has the same advantages as the 600 V bipolar design with respect to 2-wire circuits when determining maximum system voltage ratings for components. It also has the potential, as does the 600 V bipolar design, to eliminate the inverter isolation transformer for low voltage (480 VAC) interconnections. However, it has the same drawbacks as the 1000...
