Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Individual: A Bacculaureate, Delivered to the Class of Seniors, at the Commencement of the Indiana University, August 13, 1851 This occasion, young gentlemen, is called the Commence ment. The word is very significant. A commencement is a beginning: and wherever there is a beginning there also is an ending. The day is dawning and the night ending at the same moment now to the people who live at a certain dis tance to the west of us; and, as the earth revolves on its axis, this point is brought in succession to the eyes Of all its inhabitants: and, as it pursues its annual course through the heavens, it brings, with the same unvarying regularity, the point at which one season of the year goes away and the next takes its place. What an impressive lesson does this emblem hold forth to our consideration! One generation cometh and another goeth. Life is a journey of successive stages: and at the ultima linea rerum where this life ends, another life begins. The most interesting difference between that portion of life which with you is now ending and that which is in its commencement, consists in this, that, from this time onward, you are each of you to be more an individual than hitherto. The Individual: let this be the theme, therefore, of our present meditations. I shall not undertake to discuss it fully, I 4 I but only to suggest a few things in relation to it, which may afford matter for useful re?ection in reference to that part which you may severally be called upon to act in future life. First of all, let us form to ourselves a distinct conception...
