Dept. of Commerce, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, National Marine Fisheries Service, 2008. LC Number: TD196. C93 C915 2008 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)631148483 Subject: Cyanides -- Environmental aspects -- Congresses. Excerpt: . . . Validation of the ISE method applied in the Philippines should be conducted by an independent laboratory not currently involved in marine sh testing to resolve questions about QA QC, precision, and bias. This should include an examination of the sensitivity of the ISE method for sh samples, with emphasis on the distillation process and the recovery of cyanide from tissue samples. Results should be compared using at least one other recognized method. With some discretion exercised to limit the amount of testing, the ISE method can be validated in a relatively short time. The same cannot be said for any other method. A large amount of research will be necessary to develop methods to detect either thiocyanate or ATCA present in imported MAF, and to validate those methods. Recommendation 3: Establish networks of CDT laboratories at points of export A testing strategy based in export countries should focus on airport choke points in order to sample shipments before export. This approach would require fewer testing stations and would create better monitored and controlled testing conditions and procedures. This test must be rapid, credible, standard for all countries involved in the marine aquarium sh trade, and legally defensible, and it must utilize independently collected (e. g. , blind) samples from shipments. It must also be able to accurately detect cyanide 5 to 14 days after the sh are exposed, as the time for transport to landing area and then landing area to export point..
