

Fleur de Lis (Paperback)

By Jennifer Reeser

Saint James Infirmary Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . This book - the author s fifth collection - contains new translations of Charles Baudelaire, poems of Paris, verses for the victims at Charlie Hebdo, poems of New Orleans, and more. These poems have appeared in journals such as the Paris digital revue, Levure Litteraire, in Europe s leading literary e-zine, Recours au Poeme, in American academic journals such as Able Muse and THINK, in mass publications such as The Writer, The National Review, and others. With a foreword by French scholar and Baudelaire authority, Kathryn Oliver Mills. The breath of Paris pushes at my shutters, writes Jennifer Reeser, twenty-first-century flaneuse and elegant, rhyming translator of the great 19th-century French poet, Charles Baudelaire. Fleur-de-Lis is an example of how deeply a European city and that city s poet can enter an American writer s heart. Though Jennifer Reeser is no innocent abroad and hardly maudit -she is deeply Christian-the ghost of the nineteenth century haunts the cadences of this immensely talented, stylish, New-Orleans-based formalist whose work confronts the malformations of her soul (Fleur-de-Lis / Fleurs du Mal): I have...
