Excerpt from Thrilling Narrative of the Dark and Terrible Deeds of Henry Madison: And His Associate and Accomplice, Miss. Ellen Stevens, Who Was Executed by the Vigilance Committee of San Francisco, on the 20th September Last The year 1847 came; the tide of affairs took a different turn. Our correspondents in Europe failed in their engagements and the house of G., R., L. Co. stopped payment. My father who had been in a delicate state of health for some months past through over excitement from the speculative business he was engaged in, soon gave way to the disease which had firmly seized upon him. On his death bed he charged me to give up all to his creditors, pay every cent he owed as far as his assets would admit of, and trust to God and our own industry for the maintainance of my sisters and myself. What a change from wealth to poverty! We who have been accustomed to every luxury and want that the former supplied, reduced to what the latter scantily afforded! However, the good education that both I and my sisters had received now saved us. They took in sewing etc.; I got a situation as salesman or clerk in a large dry-goods store in Market street. There it was I became first acquainted with Miss Allworth. One day a gentleman from Baltimore walked into our store accompanied by Miss Allworth; he was her uncle and a good customer to the house. I was immediately struck by her handsome appearance, for she was indeed a lovely girl. During their stay in the store, I became quite enamored of her, and hearing from the conversation that passed between her uncle...
