

Requirements for Successful Return and Resettlement After Long Term Internal Displacement

By Etienne Salborn

GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Condition: New. 64 pages. Dimensions: 8.3in. x 5.8in. x 0.1in. Bachelor Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject Sociology - War and Peace, Military, grade: 2, 0, Management Center Innsbruck (Nonprofit-, Sozial-, and Gesundheitsmanagement), language: English, abstract: The achievement of relative peace in Northern Uganda in 2006, was the stardom to end the mass internal displacement for over 1. 8 million people. Return and resettlement became the major task for recovery and development. It is not only the time and intensity of the Northern Ugandan conflict influencing peoples decision to leave the displacement camps to return to their former place residence, but certain requirements need to be met as well as obstacles overcome. This study identifies and describes these requirements based upon a broad literature review. Basic services and infrastructure, such as health care, clean water sources and schools need to be reconstructed, as they are essential to ensure basic human needs. The most vulnerable and war affected individuals, such as the elderly, sick, disabled, widows and orphans are the ones most reluctant to return and require special assistance. Shelter construction and solutions to land disputes are most crucial, as they are the major obstacles hindering the...
