Excerpt from Popular Government, Vol. 27: October 1960 The best sources for laws passed by the Colonial and State Legislatures in the years before 1791 are volumes 23, 24, and 25 of The State Records of North Carolina, issued in the years 1905 and which are part of a 27-volume series entitled Colonial and State Records of North Carolina. The three volumes contain all the laws for the period mentioned which were extant in 1905. Basic sources were the State Archives in Raleigh and the British Archives in London. Chief Justice Walter Clark, editor of the three volumes, notes with satisfaction that the collection contains a nearly complete body of the laws from 1715 through 1790. A supplement at the end of volume 25 contains laws which were not available at the time the first volumes went to press. The index to these volumes is extensive and seems to be excellent, at least so far as a search for laws concerning particular cities or counties is concerned. It appears that an index entry was made every time the name of a city or county was mentioned or appeared in the text for any reason. Laws of North Carolina, a compilation of laws in effect in 1791, which was made by James Iredell, contains local legislation only if it changes county boundaries, and is far inferior to the Clark volumes as to public laws, in spite of the reputation of its editor, who, at the time of the compilation, was an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court. The index is topical only. Martin's Private Acts, compiled by Francis X. Martin in 1794, purports to contain all private...
