Excerpt from Louisiana Conservationist, Vol. 27: January/February 1975 A field border will provide the necessary cover. This border is the edge of a field or forest opening and is the foundation of game management on any land. These may be a fencerow, hedgerow, turn row, roadside, ditchbank, woodland or any odd area. They usually have different kinds of vegetation than that found in the field or opening. The edge effect of this border, along fields or open ings, is extremely productive for quail and other wild life. Ln these borders are located places for feeding, loafing, dusting, sunning, nesting, travel lanes, and living with protective cover. Doves may use the border for nesting, rabbits for cover, woodcock may use the denser part, and where a few trees are left standing, even squirrel and deer may be found.
