Excerpt from Croonian Lectures: On Some Points in the Pathology and Treatment of Typhoid Fever; Delivered at the Royal College of Physicians of London On the whole, though the point cannot be regarded as finally determined, I think the weight of evidence is against the de novo origin of the disease. We have now to consider a question about which much difference of opinion still prevails, viz., the contagiousness of typhoid fever. That the disease is communicable from the sick to the healthy is, I believe, universally acknowledged, the point in dispute being the mode in which the transmission takes place, whether directly by emanations from the patient, or from his fresh evacuations, or indirectly from eating or drinking, or inhaling the emanations from the stools, modified by their having undergone some kind of decomposition or fermentation outside the organism. Although the point in dispute is a narrow one, it is of considerable importance, and erroneous views may lead, on the one hand, to the adoption of unnecessary restrictions, which may seriously incom mode the patient and his attendants, while at the same time it is only too likely to cause a neglect of the really essential precautions.
