I then rose, and being graciously supported by the presence of my God and my Saviour, said, Thank God you cannot rob me of my Christ--you cannot deprive me of the comforts of religion. I feel this moment as much as ever I did in my life, that God is mine and I am his, and although you have dis severed me from one section of the church of God I can join another, and these are my supports and consolations in this grievous trial. Thus, Sir, despotism immolates its victims: and having obliged pious and conscientious men to leave their quiet and obscurity to oppose its encroachments, it punishes their opposition as a crime, and, in the name of God, drives out from his churches the objects of his love! But among the defences of your power, none is more exactly adapted to its intended purpose, than the authority rested in your superintendent preachers, of presiding-at all meetings, and of dissolving them by vacating; the chair, whenever any subject is introduced which they deem unmethodistical; or in other words, whenever a proposition is submitted, opposed to their views, or likely to be ungrateful to the rulers of your Conference: after which dissolution, the meeting, if continued, becomes illegal, or a rebellion meeting; and every person taking part in its proceedings renders himself linble, as in the case of Mr. Greenhalgh, to excommunication. The laws to which I chiefly refer are these: --As the Leaders...
