Booksurge Publishing, United States, 2006. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This is a collection of thoughts influenced by everyday life. There is something great about each person on this earth. At the same time, there is something weak within each of us. This is what makes us human. We work each day to make a better tomorrow, providing for our families and helping our fellow man. Our effort to become greater as a people is captured in this collection. In a world that is ever changing, our struggles, our failings, and our victories are part of being human. Therefore, we sometimes forget the greater good. We are all common people, until we decide to be greater. Over time, we each make the difference in each other's lives. The greater good is what is best for all of us, instead of our selfish, short sighted individual achievements. Realizing something great in each person around us, we can inspire our fellow man to be greater, regardless of how small or insignificant our influence. This book is a tribute to those whom inspire us everyday to overcome our challenges and make us thankful for the good life we live. As a man makes his way through life by the sweat of his brow and the pain of his labor, he must find the deeper meaning of his life works. This book is a collection of poetic expressions from the working man's point of view. Each work is meant to honor the American work ethic and our freedom as a people to strive for greatness. We play an important role in each other's lives. Everyday we go out into this world, it is up to us to make the difference in our fellow...
