Excerpt from Report of the Virgin Islands Agricultural Experiment Station, 1928 The work at the station was continued along the same general lines as in previous years. Some improvements were made to the station buildings and equipment. In connection with animal husbandry, milk and butterfat production records were again kept of native, grade, and Guernsey cows. A comparison of the egg-producing qualities of the native hen and the Single Comb White Leghorn breed indicated an advantage in favor of the latter in both numbers and size of eggs. Truck-crop tests were conducted on a relatively large scale, with the View to determining the practicability of market ing the produce in New York City. The work of the agronomist included field and laboratory com parisons of more than 60 varieties of sugarcane. Nine new kinds were introduced and several others are being grown in quarantine in St. Thomas pending their shipment to St. Croix. Approximately new seedling varieties have been developed within the past three years, and of these seedlings are still under test.
