Interacting with the Dead: Perspectives on Mortuary Archaeology for the New Millennium

By -

University Press of Florida. Paperback. Condition: New. 416 pages. Dimensions: 9.3in. x 6.4in. x 1.1in. The impressive geographical, temporal, and topical coverage makes this volume by far the best of its kind to appear in recent years. --George R. Milner, Pennsylvania State University A kaleidoscopic collection of studies with fascinating insights into the myriad and bizarre ways that our species has treated its dead . . . global coverage of human interactions with our dead, past and present . . . an indispensable reference for all scholars interested in death and burial. --Michael Parker Pearson, University of Sheffield This collection explores the behavioral and social facets of funerary, mortuary, and burial rites in both past and present societies. By utilizing data from around the world and combining recent and ongoing concerns in anthropology, it takes the study of mortuary archaeology to a new and significant level of interdisciplinary research. Drawing inspiration from ethnohistory, ethnography, bioarchaeology, and sociocultural anthropology, the authors focus on themes of gender, ancestorhood, ritual violence, individual agency, space and placement, and extended and secondary mortuary ceremonialism. They also expand the interdisciplinary focus of mortuary practices and reassess previous anthropological theories. No previously published work on the archaeology of...
