Excerpt from Street Talk: Ordinance of Councils, Passed the 11th July, 1844, Organizing a Military Force for the Government of Philadelphia This force, it will be observed, is not to be a mere body of men, armed with deadly weapons-some troops of horse, or a squadron of foot, it is to be a small army - what military men recognize as technically an army. There is the infantry, there is the artillery, and there is the cavalry; add a corps of sappers and miners, and the army of Philadelphia, raised by the town council, would be more complete in all its members, than was the army of the United States, raised by Congress, which invaded Canada, in 1813. The city government, except for such soft purposes as picking up fractious ladies, and collaring candidates for the House of Refuge, and perchance of dealing with a few pickpockets and burglars, has turned over to a full regiment of infantry, a full battalion of artillery, and one or more full troops of cavalry, with suitable ammunition and stores, the whole care of what they...
